Writing Cover Letters

A cover letter is an additional document to your CV or application form. It's a way to extend the information that an employer sees about you.

What should a cover letter include?

- Personal details (eg. name, phone number)
- The hiring manager's name (if available)
- Where you found the vacancy
- Why you're suitable for the job
- What you can do for the company
- A closing statement (including 'thank you' for their time)

Top Tip

Your cover letter should be about half an A4 page.

Standing out from the crowd

- It's always good to have an understanding about the company, and to link your cover letter to parts of the job description/person specification
- Even something simple shows the employer you've done your research. For example...

"I'm passionate about the environment and (from your website) I saw you have a good recycling scheme."

Top Tip

Make sure your personal statement 'sounds' like you to help the employer get to know you.
